Đoạn văn 1 — A discrepancy in the shipping documents

On Monday, GreenPort Trading received a shipment of office chairs. The commercial invoice showed 120 chairs, but the packing list showed 118. The company's customs broker spotted the difference while preparing the import declaration and contacted the supplier. At the same time, GreenPort asked its warehouse staff to count the chairs before moving them into storage.

The warehouse staff counted 118 chairs. The supplier then confirmed that two chairs had failed a quality check and had been left behind. The supplier had updated the packing list before dispatch but had forgotten to change the invoice. On Tuesday morning, it sent a revised invoice showing the correct quantity. The broker compared the revised invoice with the packing list and the warehouse count before completing the declaration.

After the incident, GreenPort changed its internal procedure. Staff now compare the invoice and packing list before a shipment leaves the supplier's warehouse. If they find a difference, they contact the supplier and ask for the documents to be corrected. The purchasing manager explained that checking the documents earlier would give the supplier more time to correct errors and help the broker avoid last-minute delays.

31. What problem did the customs broker discover?
A. The shipment arrived at the wrong warehouse.
B. The two documents showed different quantities.
C. The commercial invoice was missing.
D. The packing list showed the wrong product name.

32. Why were two chairs left behind?
A. The transport company had no space for them.
B. The warehouse staff refused to receive them.
C. The buyer cancelled part of the order.
D. They did not pass the supplier's quality check.

33. In paragraph 2, the word "it" in "it sent a revised invoice" refers to _____.
A. GreenPort Trading
B. the warehouse
C. the supplier
D. the customs broker

34. Which document did the supplier correct on Tuesday morning?
A. The commercial invoice.
B. The packing list.
C. The import declaration.
D. The warehouse count sheet.

35. Why did GreenPort change its procedure?
A. To allow warehouse staff to count the chairs after delivery.
B. To stop using packing lists for future shipments.
C. To give the warehouse staff responsibility for completing declarations.
D. To detect document errors earlier and reduce delays.

Đoạn văn 2 — An online appointment system

A local customs office introduced an online appointment system for businesses that need to discuss complex cases with an officer. When booking, users select a time slot, enter their case reference number, and briefly describe the issue. They receive a confirmation email with instructions for uploading supporting documents. Officers can review the documents in advance, which allows them to spend more of the meeting discussing the case.

The system began with a two-month trial. During that period, the average waiting time for visitors with appointments fell from 45 minutes to 20 minutes. Some businesses, however, reported difficulty uploading files. The office responded by publishing a step-by-step guide and setting up a telephone support line. Businesses can now call the support line if they need help preparing their files.

The office still accepts visitors without appointments, but it gives priority to visitors who have booked in advance. For simple requests, such as checking the status of an application, the office encourages businesses to use the online tracking service. The goal is to keep appointments available for cases that require a detailed discussion.

A. It extended the trial by two months.
